How it works?

1

Discussion

During this phase, ideas are explored, and the project's scope is defined. In this stage, we will try to understand the client requirements and we will set the foundation for the entire process.

2

Prototype

The second step involves creating a prototype of the product. This is a preliminary version that captures the concept's essence, including basic features and functionalities.

3

Final Product

After the client approves the prototype, we will develop the final product. Once the final product is ready, we will give a fully functional demo to the client, and we will collect their valuable feedbacks, and make some changes, if necessary.

4

Delivery

Once the final product is thoroughly tested and refined, we will deliver the project to the client. Delivery also includes post-launch support, updates, and addressing any unforeseen issues that may arise after the product is in the hands of users.

Terms & Conditions

- Once the project is discussed and approved, the client needs to pay 30% of the amount estimated for the project. Rest of the amount can be paid after the completion of the project.
- If the client needs major changes in the project, after approving the prototype, then the company reserves the right to impose additional charges for the same.
- If the client fails to make the entire payment within 10 days after delivering the project, without any valid reason, then the company reserves the right to delete the project.
- Any additional services opted by the client will be charged separately.
